

What Does Entrepreneurship Mean to You?

To me, entrepreneurship means giving everything it takes to achieve your goals and dream.

Entrepreneurship allows someone to be able to turn an idea into a business.

Since joining Transcold distribution ltd, I have seen how entrepreneurship is applied in every area of the business.

Entrepreneurship is to start small while having the big picture in mind and Transcold's founder, John Coughlan is no exception to this rule. John Coughlan started the business with a small franchise that had only 8 ice cream tricycles. Years later the business keeps expanding across Canada and with offices in the USA.

I believe entrepreneurship is building something out of nothing. It is the spirit to be willing to take risks and calculating those risks by getting on and doing it. Entrepreneurship is not just a word but how we think and what we do every day in our lives.

Every day I see how Transcold cares deeply about how they handle business with Integrity & professionalism. Which continues to drive business growth over the years.

I also believe entrepreneurship is about placing importance on forging strong supplier partnerships as well as long-lasting relationships with customers and I see this applied every day to the business here at Transcold. Transcold leadership team has continued to show great commitment to exceeding customers' expectations.

I believe entrepreneurship means spotting a problem, spotting a need, and figuring out how to address that need. It is having an idea that you will serve others.

In my current role as a System Administrator in Transcold IT department, every day I see the importance technology plays to keep the business going strong. A lot of work is done in the backend to keep everything up and running.

I get to support all the backend infrastructures and business applications to ensure all the technology needs of the organization are met.

Every day I see how technology solves a lot of problems. It is motivating to see how much Transcold has invested in technology over the years which has led to high productivity among the employees and great business growth.

Technology has a crucial effect on business operations. The benefits of technology in every workplace are endless. Just to name a few, it helps with both internal and external communication, saves a lot of time, gives easy access to information, cost-efficient, and create ease of mobility to produce results that customers demand.

I believe technology is changing the way business is done and I strongly believe entrepreneurs will continue to utilize technology to its full extent to propel themselves to new heights.

Businesses so much rely on technology now that one cannot even imagine living without it.

With this scholarship, I will be granted a great opportunity to support my dream of furthering my study in Computer Information System Administration at the British Columbia Institute of Technology at Burnaby, British Columbia Canada.

I believe this opportunity will give me more knowledge to solve technical issues the business faces every day.
